A DICTIONARY, HINDUSTANI AND ENGLISH.

ا, the first letter of the Arabic alphabet, in numeration it counts one. a or a-kūra, the first elementary sound in the Sanskrit alphabet, it is a name of God, or Vishnu. As an inseparable particle prefixed to a word, it signifies negation or privation, as adharma, injustice, from dharma, justice, adhan, poor, straitened in circumstances, from a, and dhan, wealth, treasure. It is akin to the alpha privativum of the Greek, the in of Latin, or the un of the German and English. In Greek, it becomes an before a vowel, as an-anta, or without end.

اب, now, presently, just now, a little

ج jīm, or jīm-i-tāzī, the fifth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the sixth in the Persian, and the seventh in the Hindūstānī. It has the sound of j in judge. In Arabic it is a radical letter, and stands for three in the abjad numeration. It is sometimes used : 1st, for sh, as hāj for kāsh, would that I 2nd, for z, as choja for chozu, a chicken ; 3rd, for g (particularly in conformity to Arabic pronunciation), as faranj for farang, Europe ;

4th, for the final imperceptible he, as firozaj for firoza, a turquoise. Again, for j are used, 1st, t, as tārāt for tārāj, plunder ; 2nd, sh, as kuchūm for kajūm, a scorpion ; 3rd, g, as akshaj for akshaj, contrary. Rarely it is redundant, as dehāj for dehā, brocade. In words borrowed from the Sanscrit, j is generally substituted for y, particularly in the dialects of Bengal, Tirhoot, &c. When added to a pure Sanscrit substantive it denotes born, sprung, or produced from such substantive, as andaj, a bird, the egg-born, from anda; vary, the lotus, lit. sprung from water.

दाह दāhinā, right (not left). In Sanskrit dakṣiṇa signifies south or right, because, according to the Hindus, the earth, the navel of which corresponds to Himmātān, has its head to the west, its feet to the east, the right side to the south, and the left to the north; or, perhaps, the term has arisen from the position of eastern people in adoration of the rising sun. In Arabic, the word shāmī denotes north, or left, and this agrees with the manner in which the Roman augurs determined the regions of the heavens, according to Livy. It may be further stated that in the Gaelic dialects south and north are synonymous terms with right and left respectively. १.

seventh avatār, when the deity descended for the purpose of destroying Rāvana, who having (for his devotion) a promise from Brahmā that he should not suffer death by any of the usual means, was become the tyrant and pest of mankind. The Devalās came in the shape of monkeys, as Rāvana had gained no promise of safety
from them, hence Hanumāna was Rāma's general. Rāmchandra's mother's name was Kaushalyā, his younger brother Bharata was son of Kekayī, who was the cause of Rāma's going to the desert to perform devotions, on the banks of the Pampā-nadī, insisting that her son should reign the fourteen years that Rāma employed in the devotion. It was while performing his devotion, (or during his stay in the forests) in company with Lakṣmāṇa (his brother by Sumitrā) that Rāvana appeared as a beggar, while he was absent hunting, and enticed away Shītā, which gave rise to the war detailed in the Rāmāyaṇa. Shītā was daughter of Janaka Rājā, who had promised to give her to any person who could break a certain bow, which was done by Rāmachandra.

When in the forest, he drew a circle round Shītā, and forbade her to go beyond it, and left Lakṣmāṇa to take care of her, but Lakṣmāṇa hearing some noise which alarmed him for his brother, left her to seek him; then it was that Rāvana appeared and enticed her out of the circle (gandī), and carried her off in his flying chariot;
in the air he was opposed by the bird Jatāyū, whose wings he cut and escaped. Rāmachandra reigned in

ر ra, the fifteenth letter of the Hindūstānī alphabet. Its sound differs from that of re by being uttered with the tip of the tongue turned up towards the roof of the mouth. It differs very little in sound from the letter da, with which it is often interchanged, and in the Devanāgarī alphabet the same character represents both. In reckoning by abjad it counts 200, the same as re. It is very rarely used as the first letter of a word, there being, so far as we have been able to discover, only one solitary vocable under this class, viz.:—

روزا roṛā, m. a stone, a fragment of stone or brick (v. roṛū). s.

زمیندار zamīn-dār, a landlord, a land-holder.

As the term zamīn-dār differs widely in its signification from our ideas of a landlord, it may be proper to add, on the authority of Gladwin, that under the Mughal government the term was applied to a person who held a tract of land immediately of government, on condition of paying the rent of it. He was first in rank among the land-holders; if a zamindār was unable to pay up the amount of his engagements with government at the end of the year, such a part of his zamindari was sold as would discharge the balance. If he was dispossessed of the management of his zamindari, he was nevertheless exclusively responsible for all debts incurred by him during his possession, unless a mortgage was given on the zamindari, or the money borrowed applied to the payment of the revenue. Zamindārs, by the nature of their tenures, had no longer a right to their lands than whilst they paid their revenues, and in case of failure, the sale of their land was a more just and useful recompense to government than subjecting them to corporeal punishment. Should they, however, at any time have been prevented fulfilling their engagements by unavoidable accidents rather than by their own mismanagement, equity would point out what indulgence they might be entitled to on that account. p.

ف fe or fū, the twentieth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the twenty-third in the Persian, and the twenty-sixth in the Hindūstānī. This letter exists not in Sanskrit, nor in any of the modern dialects of India thence derived; and in words from the Persian or Arabic the Indians frequently change f into p or ph, as pātez for fātez, a field of melons. Prefixed to Arabic words (with the short a as fa) it denotes, and, then, afterwards, as fa katī, and that is all, merely, only. Its sound is precisely that of the English f. In reckoning by ahjad it stands for eighty.

ک

ک called kāf-i-ajamī (the Persian kāf, it being unknown in the Arabic), the twenty-sixth letter of the Persian alphabet, and the twenty-ninth Hindūstānī. Its sound is that of g hard, as in the words go, gave, never like that of g in the words gem, gentle. It corresponds to the Sanskrit ga, and in reckoning by abjad it counts 20, the same as kāf (the preceding letter). The Arabs sometime, substitute jīm for gāf, as layām for lagām, a bridle. The people of India, on the other hand, often substitute yāf for ghāia, as kāgaḥ or kūgaḥ for kāghaḥ, paper.

intentionally for a wisecrack, an ignorant fool who pretends to know more than his neighbours; as in the following answer given by a person of the description when consulted respecting the marks of an elephant's feet in mire by people who had never seen such an animal yā to biyhe Lal-Bujhakkar aur us biyhe ko c pāyan chakki bāndhkar mat karā kida kar, "Surely Lal-Bujhakkar and none else can understand this, may not an antelope with a millstone tied to his feet have bounded here?" This gentleman is evidently of the same family with the Wise Men of Gotham. Some twenty or thirty years ago there was a very popular biography of a similar character current in Scotland, attributed to the pen of the celebrated Adam Smith, entitled "The History of Wise Willie and Witty Lippy." Wise Willie is undoubtedly the full brother of Lal-Bujhakkar, for once upon a time, the folk of Kite brought him a horseshot which they had picked up, and he sagely assured them that it was the new moon, only it puzzled him sorely to account for its having fallen in Kite, as he had seen it the night before far to the south west in a different part of the country. h

ن nūn, the twenty-fifth letter of the Arabic

alphabet, the twenty-ninth of the Persian, and the thirty-second Hindustānī; it is one of the dental letters, and has the sound of the English n, with the following exceptions: the letter nūn has a very soft nasal sound in all plural terminations in ān, nī, in, and on, and in all terminations in ūn and en of the aorist and imperative of verbs; it has also this nasal sound in the middle of some words, as mañh, the face, hañmā, to smile, &c., for which no rule can be laid down; in this dictionary the nasal sound of n is always indicated by ñ; when nūn precedes he or pe it has the sound of m, as mūnbar, a pulpit (for unbar), sampal, prosperity (for sanpal, as in the case in Greek and Latin). In reckoning by ahjad, the letter nūn stands for 50; in almanachs it expresses the conjunct aspect of the stars, finally, the letter nūn with the short a (as na) prefixed to verbs renders the sense negative, as bolā, he spoke, na-bolā, he did not speak.

- و wāw, the twenty-sixth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the thirtieth Persian, and the thirty-third Hindustānī. At the beginning of a word or syllable it generally corresponds in sound to our w, but in words purely Sanskrit, it has the sound of our v. Again, the Sanskrit v is frequently changed into b in the modern Hindustānī and Beṛnālī; hence a Hindī word not found under this letter should be looked for under b. In reckoning by ahjad it stands for six. In ephemerides it represents Friday and the sign Libra. Wāw not beginning a word or syllable contributes to form the long vocal sounds o, ū, and au, fully explained in my Persian and Hindustānī Grammars.
- و wa, a copulative conjunction equivalent to our "and, with, but, now;" it is used in connecting words and phrases from the Arabic and Persian. When it merely connects two words, it is sounded o, as shab o roz, night and day. a. p.
- و wi, a particle and prefix generally denoting separation, disjunction, ascertainment, progress, privation, and nearly equivalent to our English prefixes in-, dis-, ex-, sub-, un-, &c., as vi-rakt, averse, indifferent. s.

A DICTIONARY, ENGLISH AND HINDUSTANI.

A or AN, the indefinite article, is expressed in Hindustani sometimes by the numeral "ek," one, or the indefinite pronoun, "koī," a certain one, as "ek mard," or "koi mard," a man, or a certain man. A, before verbal nouns, in such phrases as a-vesting, a-hunting, is expressed by the postposition "ko," as "wuh mulakāt ko gayā," he is gone a-vesting, "shukār ko gayā," is gone a-hunting, and frequently the "ko," is omitted after the Hindustani infinitive, which last, however, remains in the inflected state, as "wuh paine gayā," he is gone a-vesting. The meaning of a in the case of by or per, as by the yard, per mouth, &c. is expressed variously, thus, five rupees a yard, "īī gaz pānch rupae," or "sae gaz pānch rupae," or "gaz bhar pānch rupae," you shall receive a rupee a day, "tun ko 109 102 ek rupiya milegā." If the preverb a denote in or on, it will be expressed by "men," or "par," as "jahāz par," on board ship, or aboard.

HINDUSTANI MANUAL;

A Pocket Companion for those who visit India in any capacity; intended to facilitate the essential attainments of conversing with fluency, and composing with accuracy, in the most useful of all the languages spoken in our Eastern Empire.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.—A Compendious Grammar, and Exercises on its more prominent Peculiarities; with a Selection of useful Phrases, and Dialogues on familiar Subjects.

PART II.—A Vocabulary of useful Words, English and Hindustani; showing at the same time the difference of idiom between the two Languages.

Extracted from the "Friend of India," published at Serampore.

"We are favoured with a copy of the 'Hindustani Manual,' published by Dr. FORBES, the Professor of Oriental Languages and Literature in King's College, London. It is a small moderate volume of 150 pages, within which narrow space more instruction is condensed than is to be found in works of four times its size and cost. The first thirty pages, which comprise the first and second sections, contain a brief but very accurate view of the essential principles of the language. The great recommendation of this Epitome of Grammar is, that it furnishes all the elementary information which it is necessary for the Student to acquire. He may purchase a larger and more expensive work, without finding those studies facilitated. If a great book is ordinarily a great evil, a great Grammar is a still greater evil, and the man deserves no small credit and gratitude who succeeds in abridging that dulllest period of study which is devoted to grammatical refinements. The third section contains a copious List of Useful Phrases; and the fourth, a series of Dialogues, or rather sentences, regarding the ordinary business of life.

"We have then a Military Vocabulary, and a course of Military Phrases; and in the last thirty pages, a Practical and Phraseological Vocabulary.

"The Work can be honestly recommended to all who are desirous of acquiring the elements of the language, or of making themselves understood among the people of this country. We have seldom, if ever, seen such a small pocket companion with such a variety of useful instruction. The language of the Vocabulary and of the Dialogues appears quite unexceptionable. Any one acquainted with Hindustani will at once recognize its idiomatic accuracy, and cheerfully recommend it to the notice of all those who desire to come out to India not altogether unprepared to obey their own wishes to those who surround them."
